MRS. EUNICE BEMIS IS LAID AT REST TODAY

Market Borne to Its Last Resting Place by Three Sons and Three Grandsons.

At the Bemis home, one and a half miles east of Footville at one o'clock today, the last solemn funeral rites for one of Rock county's pioneers were held and all that was mortal of Mrs. Eunice M. Bemis was tenderly laid at rest beside her husband in the little burying ground near the home.

With the passing to the world beyond of Mrs. Bemis, another of the women who came to this section of the state when it was but a western wilderness, who suffered the trials and tribulations of the early settlers in sparsely settled communities, is taken from our midst.

Born at Byron, Genesee county, New York state, May 1, 1823, a descendant of the old Dutch settlers of the Empire state, the Van Rensselaers, she was married December 19th, 1841, to Jervis Bemis and came to Wisconsin with her husband and one child in 1845, making her home on the farm her husband secured a government patent on the year previous, where she has since resided, except for a short period when she resided in Janesville some fifty years ago.

When Mrs. Bemis came to Wisconsin there were no railroads to travel on and the trip from New York state was made by boat around the Great Lakes, landing in Milwaukee, which was made a part of every day. From Milwaukee the Bemis family drove overland with an ox team to the farm and began their pioneer life. In the early pioneer days her loving aid and kindred aided many of the little colony that had settled near them. When the great struggle between the north and south began, she became an active worker in the soldiers' aid societies, her husband being one of the recruiting officers of the state.

During the period that Jenkin Lloyd Jones conducted All Saints church in Janesville, she was a faithful member of his congregation and an earnest worker in all good projects.

One sister, Marya Fowle, also a pioneer of Emerald Grove, still lives and makes her home in Oshkosh. Four of six sons survive: Daniel Bemis of Yampa, Calif.; K. J. Bemis and Fred H. Bemis, residing on the old homestead; and Dr. J. B. Bemis of St. Paul and by one of two daughters, Mrs. Philip B. Parker of New York.

Her descendants number thirty-six grand children, thirty-eight great grandchildren, and one great, great grandchild.

Three sons and three grandsons carried the coffin to its last resting place after Reverend Larramore had said the comforting words to those left to mourn her loss.

HIGHS DROP FIRST GAME AT TOURNEY TO BELOIT 17 TO 13

Beloit Comes Back Strong in Last Half and Wins Game 17 to 13.—Janesville Has One More Chance.

Luck and poor basket shooting was still against the Janesville high school basketball team last night in the first game at the Whitewater tournament, when by a score of 17-13, it was a hard fought struggle throughout the whole time and was the fastest and best played contest in the series last night on the normal floor. Weakness on free throws could be called the main reason for their defeat. Out of eight chances Cushing missed seven of them and Lee made one.

Carr of Beloit won the game for his team when he threw five goals out of twelve chances. He also made two field goals. After some five minutes of play Beloit opened the score with one point on a foul goal. Two more points were added before the Blue and White players woke up to the fact that they were playing basketball, and when they did get a start during the first period five baskets were made.

It had seemed as though Beloit had adopted the five men back system, but as the game progressed, Janesville soon broke this up with some fast team work. Many fouls were called on both sides for holding and the on double dribble. The score at the end of the first half was 10-7 in Janesville's favor.

Second Period.

Janesville went to sleep again in the second period and failed to get more than one basket and a free throw. During the last few minutes of play Richards made a basket from the middie of the floor which startled everyone. Ternan, the Line City's center, was ruled out of the game when he had four personal fouls marked up against him. Scheible took his place and played a good game.

Both the Janesville guards played good defense and the winners had a hard time working the ball past them. All the members of the team played stellar games and the defeat could not be laid to any one player.

This afternoon at three-thirty o'clock they met the Broadhead five. They still have a chance for first place providing they do not lose a game and if Edgerton can defeat Beloit. The final games will be played on Saturday afternoon and a large number of Janesville rooters expect to attend if the locals manage to get in the last games.

Summary.

Janesville, 13—Cushing, c; Richards, rf; Kober, lf; Cronin, rg; Lee, lg; Kakuske, Morse, subs.

Free throws—Lee, 1 out of 1; Witte, lg; Belmer, rg; Scheible, sub center.

Free throws—Cushing 3, Richards 3, Kober 3, Carr 3, Belmer 1, out of 1; Cushing, none of 6; Carr, 5 out of 12.

Tourney Flips.

Janesville's losing streak seems to have returned. Those who saw the game could plainly see Janesville's good team work.

Williams of Whitewater started to referee the contest but Fry of Beloit collided with him and he had to retire.

The team received a rousing send-off last night when they departed for Whitewater. About two hundred students were on the station and a special committee composed of Evelyn Welsh, Jessica George, Ruth Granger, Sybil and Carol Richardson, Robert C. S. Hogan, Ed Pond, Manilla Powers and Constance Allen decorated the car in blue and white streamers.

Other Games.

In the first game Edgerton defeated Oregon by a score of 25 to 11. The Tobacco city boys were a little out of form and should have made a better showing.

Whitewater lost to Fort Atkinson in the afternoon by a score of 25 to 11. The Tobacco city boys were a little out of form and should have made a better showing.

BOSTWICK BOWLERS BATTLE MILKS; WIN

Piling up a lead of 238 pins in their first game with the Janesville Pure Milk bowlers, the Bostwick five at Miller's last night nosed out victorious with 147 pins to the good.

The ribbon counter men opened a regular die chance to stop them in the opening stanza. Against a 875 total the milkmen secured 637. The latter came back in the next two games, however, and with consistent rolling took both, by 71 and 20 pins. The outburst in the first was a hard lead to overcome and they lost the match by 137 pins. The score.

Games scheduled for tonight are between the Elks No. 1 and Elks No. 2 and the Budget State Machine company versus the Doty Works. Considerable rivalry exists between the machinists and although the prediction artists are running rife with their ideas as to which team will finish on top, it is going to be a battle from the start.

Without the Rockford basketball team who are scheduled to play the Lakota Cardinals at the Auditorium Saturday night, show unexpected strength the Lakotas see a victory that will enable them to substantiate their title claims. The Lakotas hold no fear of Fogarty and Young, the two Rockford stars, as they both have played against and with the Lakotas, and their style of playing is well known to the Janesville athletes.

Stegeman will be hard player for the Lakotas to hold, for besides being a crack performer he is not over gentle in his tactics and manner of playing. The rougher the game the better Stegeman likes it. Dalton will be pitted against Fogarty and Elder against Murphy, according to the present plans. Young will undoubtedly go up against Atwood, and in this way the stars of the two teams are pitted against each other. It will not be known for certain who will play the other forward until Saturday.

Lakotas, stated this morning for the charges made against him at Carroll College were not for having accepted money in any athletic, which would make him a professional, but from College authorities pressed their charge on the fact that he had played on two teams, Carroll and at Janesville.

ROBINSON LEADS HIS SQUAD IN FLORIDA TO WIN PLACE FOR BROOKLYN NATIONALS

Daytona, Fla., March 10.—Springtime music, the resounding boom of the old slow ball in Chief Myers' capacious mitt, rang out in Daytona to the accompaniment of creaking joints and the muffled slap-slap of trainers' paws on muscles soaked with liniment. The Brooklyn Dodgers, nearly forty of 'em all told, are here for spring training.

While Wilbert Robinson, the round, brown, counted noses and doled out playing regiments, Charlie Ebbetts, who is merely owner, wrestled the checkbook and an impending attack of writer's cramp. Horrible devastation reigned in the dining room following the concerted onslaught of the regiment from over the bridges. When the hard swooped out sundry waiters pawed over thin smooth dimes found hiding under the plates and Ebbetts paid out enough green stuff to indemnify Belgium.

George Cutshaw, Gustave Goetz and H. H. Myers, accompanied by many scribes, arrived today completing the aggregation. They came down the bumpy main in the motor car, shirking Apache from Brooklyn and landed at a three-day tussle with Old Man Neptune and the latter's white-capped cohorts.

From north and west they came, these famished slaves of the Baseball System, eager for the fray. The pitchers, after preparing for weeks at Hot Springs, Ark., arrived in better condition than usual, with a fling corps at the opening of the camp's regular training.

Jack Coombe, Larry Craney, Ruben Marquand, Ott Miller, Sherrod Smith, Nap Rucker, Edward Griffin and Chief Myers himself constituted the crowd from Hot Springs. Incidentally, the season again brings together Marquand and Myers, parted when John McGraw sent Ruben to the Yanks.

Ebbetts came to Daytona two weeks ago and Robbie got on the ground shortly afterward. W. G. Dell and G. L. McCarty, battery themselves, came on the heels of the higher pair. Zack Wheat, M. Wheat and O. M. O'Meara met the Hot Springs bunch at McComb and came down through Dixie with them.

Others on the Dodgers' list are Charlie Stengel, I. M. Moulton and Edward Appleton. Some of the rookies are Stevenson, Miller, Johnson, Goodbread, Mails, Priest, Riley, Hickman and Colwell.

MILWAUKEE IS EXCITED OVER A SKAT TOURNAMENT

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Milwaukee, Wis., March 10.—Wisconsin skat enthusiasts are jubilant over the announcement that the next annual tournament of the North American Skat league will be held in this city.

It was planned to hold the tournament at St. Paul but because of financial difficulties since the Peoria tournament of last year, it was decided best to hold the affair in the strongest skat city in the country. The deficit of about $1,000 from the Peoria tournament, will be taken care of by Milwaukee.

The tournament will open on July 8 and continue for three days. The first prize probably will be $1,000. The admission, as usual, will be $5.00.

BOSTWICK BOWLERS BATTLE MILKS; WIN

Piling up a lead of 238 pins in their first game with the Janesville Pure Milk bowlers, the Bostwick five at Miller's last night nosed out victorious with 147 pins to the good.

The ribbon counter men opened a regular die chance to stop them in the opening stanza. Against a 875 total the milkmen secured 637. The latter came back in the next two games, however, and with consistent rolling took both, by 71 and 20 pins. The outburst in the first was a hard lead to overcome and they lost the match by 137 pins. The score.

INDIANA SEES SUCCESS FOR STEIN AS A COACH

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Bloomington, Ind., March 10.—Students and alumni of Indiana university are looking forward with interest to the first appearance of Edward O. ("Jumbo") Steinhilber, former director of athletics at the University of Nebraska, who will assume a similar position at Indiana this spring. Coach Steinhilber, from whom great things are expected, will make his first bow to the supporters of the cream and crimson, at the annual high school basketball tournament to be held here March 17 and 18. A dinner will be given the night of the 18th for the high school players and on that occasion the new coach will make his maiden speech as mentor of athletics in a conference college.

The Bloomington chamber of commerce also has arranged a dinner for Mr. Steinhilber, which will be held the evening of March 22. The new coach has been asked to outline some of his plans for putting Indiana back on the football map and he will receive a pledge of support from the Bloomington business men.

The alumni of the university have planned a state wide reception to be given Coach Steinhilber at Indianapolis the evening of March 25. This will be in connection with the annual concert of the Indiana University Glee club in Indianapolis. The function will be followed by a dance at the Claypool hotel. At one of the recent weekly luncheons of the alumni in Indianapolis, it was said that a number of the elder graduates made a strong plea that the old fashioned dances be included in the program as they did not feel sorry enough to undertake some of the new fangled steps. Some of these men had won fame on gridiron, track and diamond, too.

Coach Steinhilber's first active duties will be undertaken when spring football training starts.

Bill Sullivan is out with an announcement that the Detroit twirlers will be expected to hit as well as throw and has been giving his mound men a daily session of batting practice.

Bill McKetchnie has reported to Manager Fielder Jones of the St. Louis Browns and the singular scrap for the hot corner between Charley Deal, Jimmy Austin and McKetchnie is now on in full blast.

THE MEXICAN SITUATION.

One could almost believe that the raid of Villa on the little border city of Columbus was especially staged just at this time for the annoyance of the administration. However, it is taken place and the question of the country as a whole wants to know is: "What is going to be done about it?" It is a critical time down on the border and Funston and his eighteen thousand men can not cope with the situation unless given further aid. The news that the president will order Villa captured and punished is one thing to say and another to accomplish. It may mean an invasion of Mexico by an armed force.

Such an invasion would mean war and with the seasoned armies of Carranza and Villa and the other revolutionary leaders united to drive back the hated "Gringo" invader it would need more than the puny military force the United States has available to accomplish any results. That the matter will be threshed out in the halls of congress is most certain. That the Jingo element will demand reprisals, even going so far as to insist upon an armed intervention, is certain, but what will the administration do? Thus far the "watchful waiting" policy has not proven a success. Is it too late to change?

INCOME TAXPAYERS.

March first for most of us was a date with no special significance, save as the traditional beginning of spring. For those with sizable incomes, it was the date when returns must be filed with the collector. The income taxpayers should smile cheerfully. They are exceptionally blessed. Nevertheless, some of them show signs of irritation at the law's complexities, and complain that their neighbors are commonly exempt from its exactions.

Of course the law still has eccentricities. When a man buys a bond for $1,000 and sells for $1,100, he is taxed for his profit. When he buys for $1,000 and sells for $900, he can't deduct his loss. Says Uncle Sam, "Heads I win, tails you lose." The proceeds under the new law have been lower than was generally expected. It raises the question whether fair returns are being made. Tax laws have been evaded from time immemorial. It is not likely that the new statute created more dishonesty than previously existed. The fear of the state laws have been made or enforced on the theory that statehoods would be tolerated. If people were assessed about five times a fair amount, it was in effect figured that they would lie out of the surplus, so that the result would be fair. Such inequities have created a feeling that these laws are in a different class from others.

The income taxpayer will feel better to lay his cards down on the table and pay accordingly. There ought to be a new viewpoint about taxes. It is time for a gentleman's agreement between the law-making power and the property-owner. A tax should be a debt of honor. Legislatures and congress should make a more serious effort to have taxes equitable. It is not sufficient justification for a law that it is a good revenue producer. If it is fundamentally wrong, it creates habits of dishonesty that in the long run costs high.

PREPAREDNESS.

No matter how peaceful may be our thoughts, how pacific our temperament, still the question of preparedness is one that is being slowly driven home to us in a manner that can not fail to bring results. It was the stumbling block that caused Judge Garrison to resign from Wilson's cabinet and it will cause a further split in the democratic ranks before it is all decided upon. The Wall Street Journal takes President Wilson and his plan for preparedness to task when it says that:

"Some of the fundamental principles under the Wilson program for national defense should be closely examined. Preparedness without knowledge of costs and the way for payment is foolishness. Under laws recently enacted the country faces an admitted treasury deficit next June of $255,000,000. Outside estimates run higher. By retaining the duty on sugar and continuing the emergency revenue act, the Wilson estimate is still a total deficit of some $112,000,000. To cover his preparedness program, President Wilson does not propose any tax upon the 70 per cent of imports now duty free into this country, nor does he propose to restore the tax on the foreign products, which before the opening of the war were larger volume of kitchen aprons.

coming into this country under the Wilson tariff and closing down our own mills and factories. "It matters not that in Jefferson's time more than 30 per cent of the government revenue was raised by custom duties, while today less than 40 per cent is raised by taxes on imports. We must prepare for defense and modern democratic theories of taxation must not be interfered with. "President Wilson admits that he has learned something since he has been in the White House. But he has not yet the light or the courage to back-track on his academic theories. His preparedness program begins with the declaration that 'The new bills should be paid by internal taxation.'

"In other words the policy must be continued of admitting foreign made goods free and taxing those we produce at home; we must not restore duties on iron and steel from abroad, but put a 25 cent tax per ton on pig iron at home and on our own manufactures of iron and steel. Europe has cheap man-power and cheap horse-power. To compete with Europe, put a tax of 50 cents per horse-power on automobiles and internal explosion engines in this country. The true Wilson policy of home trade development is stimulus to it by free imports from abroad and heavy taxes at home. We want no no-house growth; arbor culture is the thing. Cut off the limbs of the trees, reduce their roots in the soil and they will grow stronger and the tree trunk will be sturdier. The way to cultivate American trade and make it stronger is to cut its roots by taxation, trim the limbs by legal prosecution and persecution so as to narrow the growth. If it survives, it will some day flourish with new roots and limbs.

"The way to get preparedness is to tax it. The way to have munition factories and ordnance factories built in this country is to double the tax on their products. The way to promote industry in this country is to tax it; trim it through the department of justice; trim it through political agitation. Look at the success we have had in taxing, pruning and trimming our shipping industry. The shipping that survives will be exceptionally strong and rugged, and able to weather all attacks.

"The way to develop American enterprise is to accelerate the tax upon it. The way to help the multi-millionaire and stimulate him to work more than twelve hours a day is to narrow his field by taxation. If he broadens his investments, make him pay an increasing tax on his profits and don't let him deduct his losses from his profits. "In this country the men of wealth have made business, investments, railroad building, commerce and manufacturing expansion their sport in place of horse racing, fox hunting, grouse shooting, etc.

"Nearly every big inheritance tax list shows the majority of enterprises on the list to have been more or less failures. But a few big successes have covered these and made the fortune. Therein lies the game, the mystery. The man of business and millions dabbles with real estate development, possibilities in farming, and adventure in shipping; puts something into manufacturing, invests in transportation, gains knowledge and experience, and feels his way to added fortune which is finally realized only on a few lines.

"Hereafter this must be treated by taxation. A man must study his investments first and not feel his way experimentally. Experimental investments are going to be made expensive by treasury ruling, which declares that in this field losses cannot be deducted from profits. The multi-millionaire must shoulder his losses and pay 7 per cent upon his profits. If upon scattered millions he makes 60 per cent profit in the success lines and 40 per cent losses in the failure lines—a net gain of 20 per cent—he must pay more than 20 per cent of this to the government.

"Great are our defensive programs when fundamentally examined. "P. S.—The Evening Post sums it up from Washington as follows: The centipede was happy quite, Until the frog, in fun, Said: 'Pray, which leg comes after which?' She lay disoriented in the ditch, Considering how to run.

The picture you see in the woman's columns are not an aeroplane cap to protect the ears while running 100 miles an hour, but merely the new peach basket hat soon to be seen on the avenue.

If the motor boats at the summer resorts that wake one up at 4 a. m. should be torpedoed, as armed merchantmen, there would be no instant demand to have the government declare war.

The new Washington, D. C. high school is said to be the finest in the country. Strange that the money could be had for a building that is in no one's congressional district.

People should be willing to risk their lives for their country, but they needn't feel they must carry it to the extent of sailing in belugger ships through the submarine zone.

The South is chiefly notable in the minds of some people, not as the home of King Cotton and fair women, but as the location of the baseball training camps.

The men won't have much opinion of the intelligence of the Women's Current Event clubs, until they know something about the stock market and baseball.

A favorite and inexpensive way to pay political debts is to "mention" a man for president as his state's favorite son, and it doesn't cost anything either.

It is claimed that wine colored dress suits will soon be in fashion for men, and all they will need to make them complete is a little lace insertion.

SETS ASIDE WILL OF MRS. BALDWIN

Judge Field Finds That Woman Was Incompetent to Make Testament Disposing of $3,000 Estate.

In an opinion filed in the probate court Judge Charles L. Field has set aside the will of Esther J. Baldwin on the ground that she was incompetent and the time the document was executed. The will which was filed for probate has been in court since last October. Under its terms Mrs. Wallace Skinner as residuary legatee would have received some three-fourths of the estate, which was valued at about $3,000, and Mrs. Barridge of this city the other fourth. Other heirs were bequeathed nominal amounts.

Objection was filed by Frank Baldwin, son of the deceased. Judge Field in his opinion says: "While there is a very strong suspicion from the testimony that the principal legatee may have used undue influence to procure the execution of this paper, it is only a suspicion and I do not find any undue influence proved."

"But I do not think that proponents have shown that this writing is her will, executed with knowledge of its contents and made as she desired, and I think it is shown that she did not have the capacity to make a will at the time this paper was executed."

Paralysis had affected Mrs. Baldwin to the utmost and it is undisputed that she could not write a word, she could not speak except perfunctory words "Yes," "No," and "I like," and there is a dispute as to whether she could say even these words.

Further on the opinion of the court says: "I am convinced that this will did not emanate from her mind and that she did not execute it with knowledge of her property and what disposition she intended to make of it."

A petition for administration of the estate will be the next move in order on the part of the contestants, whose case was handled by S. G. Dunnwiddle and Charles E. McGowan was attorney for the proponents.

In Diseases of the Liver

The Milk and Rest Treatment will do more for you than any other treatment. The liver is one of the largest and most important organs of the body. It assists in digesting food in the bowels and in purifying the blood. Diseases of this gland renders it incapable of adequately performing its functions. As a result we have such symptoms as biliousness, constipation, tired feeling, dizziness, yellowness of the eyes, deranged heart. The person may be nervous, irritable, depressed, etc.

Be convinced that this treatment will cure you. Try it.

FOODS THEY BUILD OR DESTROY

Amazing but rarely suspected truths about the things you eat.
By ALFRED W. McCANN (Copyright, 1916, by Alfred W. McCann.)

CHAPTER 27.
Upon Calcium Many of Life's Processes depend. Calcium is one of the "cash" elements removed from refined food. That nature abhors this interference with her laws becomes clear when the work performed by calcium in the living body is disclosed.

The history of life on this earth, including the history of micro-organisms, or germs as they are popularly called, is the history of food.

We have seen that the bodies of men are built from the building materials found in food. The bodies of bacteria, about which we shall have much to say, are also built from the building materials found in their food.

Bacteria may become violently active or feeble to the point of exhaustion, in accordance with the kind of food offered man. Man is affected by his food in the same way.

The blushing maiden of sixteen and the trained athlete of thirty are physically but the sum-total of the food they have assimilated.

The old man, assiduously approaching the hour of dissolution, represents all that is left of the processes of assimilation and elimination which, even prior to birth, were carried on only by virtue of the food energies which presented themselves to the embryo from which he came.

The newborn babe, in all the pink freshness of its little sleep, represents only that fragment of the food appropriated by its bones and tissues during its embryonic existence.

The bacteria that convert milk, eggs, meat, fish, and other foods into poison, represent, according to their activity, the ease with which they are able to find the kind of food necessary to their rapid growth or the difficulty placed in the way of their normal nutrition and reproduction.

Bacteria, with a significance worthy of nothing here, depend upon the mineral salts and colloids precisely in the same manner as that in which the bodies of men depend upon them.

As we go along we shall encounter many interesting, not to say fascinating, proofs of this statement.

For the present we have learned that a certain combination of some twelve mineral elements is surrendered by the food for the building processes of our bodies. We invite disorder and decay when we remove from our food one or more of these building materials.

All foods contain some of these building materials; other foods contain all of them.

Man heedlessly removes many of them from the food which he manufactures and sells to his neighbor, thereby converting such food into inadequate building materials.

Yet the men card, cataloguing the building materials supplied by breakfast, dinner, and supper, is only too frequently liable to accident or to the whim of ignorant kitchen drudge or to a food factory concerned chiefly in the profit of its products.

Many foods, for instance, contain calcium in the highly organized combinations which are acceptable to the needs of the human body. Commercial methods of manufacture remove this calcium from their products.

Absurd methods of home-cooking also remove them. That such calcium loss should not be tolerated is disclosed by a study of the functions performed in the body by calcium.

We still find, for instance, and place its still pulsing heart or a slab of marble, it will be noticed that the heart will not lose a single pulsation for some time. Eventually, of course, it will collapse and appear lifeless, but if we wish to prolong its pulsations we need only bring it into the presence of a solution of calcium.

Under the influence of this combination of curbs, usually confined to the imagination of the people to whitewash and mortar, that dead heart will show many manifestations of life. Its pulsations will be re-established.

Calcium assists the digestive ferments to perform their duties. When food is robbed of its calcium normal digestion does not progress. This influence on ferments is not confined to the digestive tract. In the laboratory and the food factory also we see it at work.

Rennet, for instance, is a ferment. It is used to make curd from milk. Curd is the first step in the manufacture of cheese. In order that the rennet may perform its duties in the curdling of milk, it must be supplied with calcium. It is necessary that the calcium natural to all normal milk be perfectly soluble. To make sure of this solubility the cheese-maker adds hydrochloric acid to the milk. He knows that if the calcium is thrown out of solution the curd will never become cheese.

Oxalic acid would throw the calcium out of solution. So would sterilization at the boiling point. In any mixture of milk so treated the ferment rennet, thus deprived of the influence of calcium, refuses to operate and the cheese-maker makes no cheese.

If, while in a state of health, you should cut your finger, the soluble calcium in your blood would cause it to coagulate at the surface of the wound and you would not bleed to death, as you would if it were not for the interference of the calcium at the disposal of nature.

In certain diseases where the normal content of calcium is no longer present in the blood the wound refuses to heal. One of the commonest symptoms of anemia, acidosis, nervous prostration, etc., is the refusal of even the slightest wounds to heal promptly.

Surgeons, realizing the importance of this function, perform calcium, frequently attempt to introduce it into the blood before serious operations in the form of calcium lactate. They do this in order to prevent hemorrhage following the use of the knife or scalpel.

No hint of the function performed by calcium is ever found on a bill of fare in a restaurant or hotel.

No placard on the wall in the office of the food factory cautioning the factory manager against the toleration of any process of refinement through which calcium or any of the other mineral elements of the prepared food are removed and lost to the human family.

Yet when we diminish the proper quantity of calcium in our blood we correspondingly lower our vitality and reduce our resistance to disease.

We can interfere with the presence of the food calcium necessary to the health of the body by removing it from our food by mechanical processes, or by interfering with the ability of our organs and glands to make use of it through eating food of a kind that systematically robs the blood and tissues of their normal calcium content.

We shall soon see how such misfortunes, for they are misfortunes, indeed, are commonly brought about.

Resinol

certainly does heal eczema

In our file of reports, covering a period of twenty years, literally thousands of physicians tell how successful the Resinol treatment is for eczema and similar skin troubles. The first use of Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap usually stops the itching and burning, and they soon clear away all trace of the eruption. No other treatment for the skin now before the public can show such a record of professional approval.

Sold by all druggists.

SOUTHERN DRUG MERCHANT MAKES UNUSUAL STATEMENT

Great Business Losses Due to Neglect

W. WITHERS MILLER
President of the Polk-Miller Drug Company, Richmond, Va., is authority for the following extraordinary statement:

"I estimate that the business men of this country could increase their efficiency fully ten per cent by taking an occasional laxative and not neglecting the bowels as most of them do."

He also said that if the Department of Commerce in Washington would present each business man in the country with a box of Rexall Ordinaries, it would be of great benefit to the national welfare. Rexall Ordinaries are prompt in action, pleasant to take and never gripe, can be used by men, women or children, and are just the thing for toning up sluggish livers.

We have the exclusive selling rights for this great laxative.

JUDGE GRIMM SUCCEEDS IN SETTLING COURT CASES IN GREEN COUNTY ALSO

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Monroe, Wis., March 10.—If present conditions continue to improve in Circuit court, the sessions of the court will be held at Plymouth on the opening and closing of the term, a session which has just closed lasted but three days compared with three or four weeks of a few years ago.

The improvement is the result of efforts of Judge Grimm who has gained state wide prominence by his success in settling cases out of court. During the session just closed not a single case went to the jury, thus saving $800 alone in jury fees.

YOUR FRECKLES

Need Attention in March or Face May Stay Covered.

Now is the time to take special care of the complexion if you wish it to look well at the end of the year. The March winds have a strong tendency to bring out freckles that may stay all summer unless removed. Now is the time to use othine—double strength.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails. Get an ounce of othine—double strength, and even a few applications should show a wonderful improvement. Some of the smaller freckles even vanishing entirely.—Advertisement.

know when I want you to go. We ain't going a step," said his wife. "Oh, all right, then?" succumbed Mr. Weston.

Really he was as excited as Joe was when he was about to take the trip to Washington. He had never been to the state capital and had never seen a real, sure enough big fair.

So it was settled that they would leave the following Tuesday on the train which passed the town at 8 o'clock, and Tom Ralston was to go with them.

CHAPTER XVII. Off to the Fair.

JOE, Mr. Weston and Tom Ralston were ensconced on the train bound for the fair. It was packed with a jolly crowd of visitors for the same destination.

"Oh, by the way, father will meet us there," said Tom Ralston joyfully. "I wired him last week we would leave today. He said last spring he wanted to see the fair and would try to get down in time, so I heard from him yesterday."

He's already there and has engaged quarters for us at the hotel. "I'll be mighty glad to see him," said Joe. "And I guess it's a good thing he has rooms for us. I saw in the paper that there was such a crowd in town that all the places were filled up and folks were sleeping in chairs in the hotel lobbies."

"I'm glad he's fixed it, too," said Mr. Weston. "I ain't much on this chair snoozin'. Every time I go to sleep in my chair it gives me a crick in my neck."

They arrived at the capital city a bit before noon. Streets and stores were gay with banners and bunting, bands were parading, and an excited, eager stream of people extended from the depot, where several excursion trains were discharging their loads.

Mr. Ralston was watching for the party and seized on them at once, shaking hands jubilantly.

CUT DOWN ON ALLOWANCE OF FLOUR IN COUNTRY NEAR THE CITY OF VIENNA NOW

Vienna, March 16.—According to a ministerial order, the amount of flour allotted to each person in country districts has been reduced from 400 to 300 grams weekly. The same order provides that persons who do not possess a home—for instance, bachelors who live in hotels or pensions—and who therefore have no need of flour, are only entitled to bread and not to flour. No family may draw more than one kilogram (2.2047 pounds) of flour plus bread per person in the space of two weeks.

HORSE SHOW IS HELD AT MADISON THIS WEEK

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Madison, Wis., March 10.—The annual horse show held under the auspices of the Wisconsin Horse Breeders' association opened here today. The horses are on exhibit at the Agricultural college. Types of all leading draft horses are being shown beside the best the state had in the line of light driving horses.

One particular model in black Taffeta Silk at $10.00, is a dream. The style is most becoming; it is made with over-drape Tunic and we have yet to find one single lady to say she doesn't like this skirt. You will find in the shopping market skirts at $15.00 that does not compare with this model.

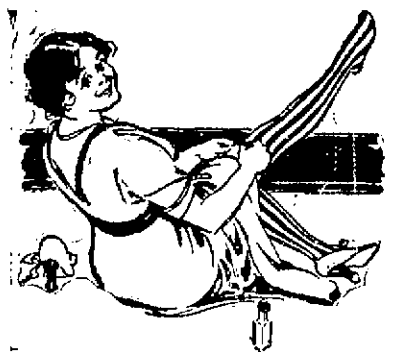

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Oh, Well, Grace Is Only Human. After All.

BY F. LEIPZIGER

"Why Swear, Dear? Use 'Gets-It' for Corns!"

It's the New Plan. Simple. Sure as Fate. Applied in a Few Seconds.

"Why, John, I never knew you to use such language! I've told you several times
it's no use to try those bandages, salves,
tapes, plasters, and contraptions for corns."

"You Wouldn't Lose Your Temper, John,
If You Used 'Gets-It' for Those Corns!"
Here's some 'Gets-It'. It's just wonderful how easy, clear and clean it makes any corn come right off. Takes but a few seconds to apply. It dries at once. Put your sock on right over it—there's nothing to stick or roll up, form a bubble of your own, or press on the corn. It's painless, simple as rolling off a log. Now put away those knives, razors and saws.
'Gets-It' and you'll have a sweet disposition and no more corns and calluses.

"MY LITTLE GIRLS ARE STRONG AND HEALTHY"

Mother Gives Credit to Father John's Medicine

Giving credit for the benefits received, the following letter from the mother of these two little girls is of special interest: "My two little girls whose picture I send you, have taken Father John's Medicine with good results. One of the children, Marcella L., had throat trouble and tried several remedies, as well as the doctor's medicine, but did not get relief until she took Father John's Medicine upon the advice of an aunt.
This little girl is now strong and healthy and able to resume her studies at school, which she had to leave for three months while under the care of the doctor. The other little girl is using the medicine as a tonic and it helps her." (Signed)

A NOVEL

By GEORGE AGNEW
CHAMBERLAIN

Copyright by The Century Co.

With her own peculiar wisdom Clem
had written not about him or herself, but about Red Hill. Alan read and then dropped the letter to his lap. His hands fell clenched at his sides. His eyes, grown large, stared out down the long vista of the mind. Walls faded away and the sounds of a great ship at sea were suddenly dumb. To his ears came instead the caroling of birds
in evening song after rain, to his eyes
a vision of Red Hill dripping light from its myriad leaves and to his heart the protecting, brooding shelter
of Maple House—of home.

It cleanses a man's soul to have been at death's door. Sickened, more than love, leads a man up. Alan was feeling cleansed—like a little child—so it seemed a quite natural thing that the girl who had taken charge of him on his arrival on board should knock at his door and then walk in. She drew out a camp-stool and sat down beside him.

She was very small and very young,
not in years but with what Alan termed to himself acquired youth. Her nearsighted eyes peered out through big glasses. They seemed to see only when they made a special effort, and yet they seemed to give out light.

"You are better," she asked, and smiled.

Alan caught his breath at that smile.
"Yes," he said, "I am much better today. I have had a letter from home."

"You must get up now and come up on deck," said the girl. "I'll wait for you outside." Her voice had a peculiar modulation. It attracted and soothed the ear.

Alan frowned and then smiled. "All right," he said, "wait for me." He dressed laboriously. His hands seemed weighted.

On deck she had his chair ready for him beside her own. She tucked his rug about him and then sat down.
"Don't talk ever, unless you want to,"
she said. "Silent people are best."

"Why?" asked Alan.

"They are springs. Their souls bubble."

"And the people that chatter?" asked Alan.

"They are geysers," said the girl,
and smiled.

Alan was entertained—almost amused. "What do you do when a geyser spouts?" he asked.

"What do you do?" replied the girl.
"I run."

"I'm afraid I haven't run—always,"
said Alan. "I generally try to clap a tin hat on them."

"You must be strong to do that. I'm not very strong."

Alan glanced over her frail body.
"What are you?" he asked.

"I'm a missionary. At least, I was a missionary. I've had to give it up.
One needs so much to be a missionary."

"I never thought of it that way,"
said Alan. "I always thought that it was the people that were unfit for almost anything else that turned to missionary as a last resort."

"Oh, no!" said the girl, sitting up very straight in her chair and fixing her eyes on his face. "How wrong
you are! Missionary, as you call it, is just another name for giving, and how can one give a great deal unless one has a great deal to give—strength
and youth and vitality?"

"And you have given all?" asked
Alan.

The girl's eyes filled.

"No, you haven't given all," went on Alan quickly. "You are still giving.
I must not borrow your last mite.
But—your voice is like a nurse's hand."

When Alan went to bed he could not sleep. For a while the little missionary girl held his thoughts. He was filled with wonder, not at her, but at himself. For once in his life he had not been flippant before grave things.

From the girl his thoughts turned to Alix. He could have cabled to her about Gerry from Pernambuco, but he had not done so. The note that he was carrying for Gerry was light—only a half-sheet, probably. The lightness of it told Alan that the things Gerry had to say to his wife could not be put on paper. Alan had almost cabled. Now

he was glad he had not done so.
"Alix," he said to himself, "let's waiting, she's trusting. A cable would have lengthened waiting by a month."

Then, without volition, his mind wandered from Alix and raced ahead to the goal of his journey. What was the goal of his journey? Whether was he bound? He reached for Clem's letter and held it in folded hands. He had no need to read it again. The words were nothing; the picture was all. It stretched before his mind, a living canvas.

Once when Alan was wandering with an Englishman in the hills above Granada, a faint odor had brought them to a sudden halt. It was the Englishman who made the surprising discovery first. "Blackberries," he said, "he had exclaimed. "Good old blackberries." And then they two had stood together, yet half a world apart,
and stared at the berry-laden bush.

What vision of a tangled, high-walled garden burst upon the Englishman Alan never knew, but to himself had come a memory of East mountain in autumn, so clear, so poignant, that it had brought his throbbing heart into his throat.

It was so now with Clem's letter.
The words were but a hurried dash,
but they touched his eyes with a magic wand. The damb became a scene, a picture, a world—his world.

Red Hill was spread out before him,
a texture where the threads and colors
of life were blended into a carpet soft but enduring. Men walked and little children played on it. Alan closed his eyes and sighed. What had he been doing with life? Making sacking?
Sacking was commercial. It paid in cash. It was the national industry.
But what could one do with sacking on Red Hill?

Then, almost suddenly, the full spirit of Clem's letter seized him. One did not take gifts to Red Hill. To every one of its children Red Hill was the source of all gifts—the source of life.
On that thought he slept.

When he was back once more in his rooms, before Switson had had time to open a bag, Alan re-directed Gerry's note to Alix to Red Hill and sent Switson out to post it. He did not try to temper the shock of the note with a covering letter. He was too weak and tired. Besides, he felt that the note carried its own antidote to joy.

The next morning a message came by hand to Alan's rooms. Alix had come to town and wished to see him at once. Would he please come around?
He replied that he was too ill. Half an hour later Switson answered a ring at the door and Alix slipped quickly past him into Alan's sitting room. There was a flush of anger in her cheeks, but Alan was pleased to see no trace of tears in her eyes. A woman's crying always touched him on the raw and seldom awakened his pity.

At sight of him Alix forgot her concern for herself. "Why, Alan?" she cried, "what is the matter?"

Alan laughed. There was a pleasant note in his laugh she had never heard

"But, Alan," said Alix, "I must know something. Is he well? Is he—"

Alan held up his hand. "Just one thing and then I'm going to sleep. I never thought the old Rook would ever
loom so big."

Alix watched him doze off. She felt
strangely comforted by the crumb he had tossed her. She went back in her mind to a dinner of long ago, when
she had defended Gerry's placid
weight against Alan. She sat on for half an hour, busy with varying thoughts. She looked curiously around Alan's sitting room. How strange
that she should be here and yet how natural. How safe she felt. She wondered if it was all because of the defenses she had raised up in herself or
whether any woman would feel safe
with the new and weakened Alan. She slept out without waking him and
sent a cable to Pernambuco. By night
she had an answer. Gerry had not yet sailed!

Days passed. She went out only for exercise. Her mind was busy with wondering. The judge called regularly.
He had put off going to Red
Hill. He wanted Alix to feel that a friend was at hand and, besides, he had Alan on his hands. Alan was worrying him in a new way. Something had gone out of him. Sometimes
he seemed to the judge a mere shell—
a blown egg, robbed of the seed of life.
The judge talked of him often to Alix,
but she could not fasten her mind on Alan. "Take him to the Hill!" was
her listless advice.

"I've tried," said the judge, "and he
says he's not ready—not strong enough.
I told him that's what he ought to go

again in her cheeks. She pulled Gerry's crumpled note from her glove and
tossed it open on the table before Alan.
He read the two or three lines in
which Gerry told her he would arrive
shortly. The brief note was intentionally colorless. "Well?" he asked.

Alix turned flashing eyes on him.
"Well? Is that all you have to say?"
Alan, it is not well. I've come here
because you must tell me—somebody
must tell me—now—all the things that
that note hides behind its wonderfully
blank, weakened, little, hypocritical
face."

Alan's eyes gleamed with amusement at the rippling words. Alix was certainly well. Then suddenly she collapsed in a chair. "Three years!" she gasped. Her hands went up to hold her head and she began to cry in a way Alan had never heard a woman
cry before. The gasping sobs racked
his nerves. He felt as though the sobs
were tearing their way up from his own breast. He gripped the arms of the chair in which he sat. His body telephoned to his brain that he was going to faint and at such astounding
news Ten Percent Wayne woke up and
took charge. "Alix!" the word snapped
out like the crack of a whip. "You
stop crying or I'll slap you, and when
I slap I slap hard."

Alix choked, swallowed and looked
at him, outraged and unbelieving.
Alan's eyes were blazing. "You listen
to me," he commanded, "listen to every word I say. You've gone through a lot
in three years, but just fasten your mind on this: so has Gerry. That
note is colorless because Gerry made
it colorless. It doesn't tell anything,
because Gerry isn't a coward and because there are things he must tell
you face to face to get your answer
clear in his own mind. I'm making
you curious with every word. All right,
be curious. But you can be sure of one thing: if Gerry had wanted me
to tell you his story he'd have asked me to, but he didn't. He didn't even ask me not to. He was standing in deep waters, but he had his head and shoulders out. He wasn't asking for my or anybody else's hand to help
him up to the bank. He didn't ask me
not to meddle because he knew I was
man enough to see where he stood
without words. He trusted me." Alix's voice trailed off weakly. He closed his eyes.

"But, Alan," said Alix, "I must know
something. Is he well? Is he—"

Alan held up his hand. "Just one

my or anybody else's hand to help
him up to the bank. He didn't ask me
not to meddle because he knew I was
man enough to see where he stood
without words. He trusted me." Alix's voice trailed off weakly. He
closed his eyes.

"But, Alan," said Alix, "I must know
something. Is he well? Is he—"

again in her cheeks. She pulled Ger-
ry's crumpled note from her glove and
tossed it open on the table before Alan.
He read the two or three lines in
which Gerry told her he would arrive
shortly. The brief note was intentionally colorless. "Well?" he asked.

Alix turned flashing eyes on him.
"Well? Is that all you have to say?"
Alan, it is not well. I've come here
because you must tell me—somebody
must tell me—now—all the things that
that note hides behind its wonderfully
blank, weakened, little, hypocritical
face."

Alan's eyes gleamed with amusement at the rippling words. Alix was certainly well. Then suddenly she collapsed in a chair. "Three years!" she
gasped. Her hands went up to hold
her head and she began to cry in a
way Alan had never heard a woman
cry before. The gasping sobs racked
his nerves. He felt as though the sobs
were tearing their way up from his own breast. He gripped the arms of
the chair in which he sat. His body
telephoned to his brain that he was
going to faint and at such astounding
news Ten Percent Wayne woke up and
took charge. "Alix!" the word snapped
out like the crack of a whip. "You
stop crying or I'll slap you, and when
I slap I slap hard."

Alix choked, swallowed and looked
at him, outraged and unbelieving.
Alan's eyes were blazing. "You listen
to me," he commanded, "listen to every
word I say. You've gone through a lot
in three years, but just fasten your mind on this: so has Gerry. That
note is colorless because Gerry made
it colorless. It doesn't tell anything,
because Gerry isn't a coward and be-
cause there are things he must tell
you face to face to get your answer
clear in his own mind. I'm making
you curious with every word. All right,
be curious. But you can be sure of
one thing: if Gerry had wanted me
to tell you his story he'd have asked me to, but he didn't. He didn't even
ask me not to. He was standing in
deep waters, but he had his head and shoulders out. He wasn't asking for
my or anybody else's hand to help
him up to the bank. He didn't ask me
not to meddle because he knew I was
man enough to see where he stood
without words. He trusted me." Alix's voice trailed off weakly. He
closed his eyes.

"But, Alan," said Alix, "I must know
something. Is he well? Is he—"

Alan held up his hand. "Just one
thing and then I'm going to sleep. I never thought the old Rook would ever
loom so big."

Alix watched him doze off. She felt
strangely comforted by the crumb he
had tossed her. She went back in her mind to a dinner of long ago, when
she had defended Gerry's placid
weight against Alan. She sat on for
half an hour, busy with varying
thoughts. She looked curiously around Alan's sitting room. How strange
that she should be here and yet how
natural. How safe she felt. She wondered if it was all because of the defenses she had raised up in herself or
whether any woman would feel safe
with the new and weakened Alan. She
slept out without waking him and
sent a cable to Pernambuco. By night
she had an answer. Gerry had not yet
sailed!

Days passed. She went out only for exercise. Her mind was busy with wondering. The judge called regularly.
He had put off going to Red
Hill. He wanted Alix to feel that a friend was at hand and, besides, he
had Alan on his hands. Alan was worrying him in a new way. Something had gone out of him. Sometimes
he seemed to the judge a mere shell—
a blown egg, robbed of the seed of life.
The judge talked of him often to Alix,
but she could not fasten her mind on Alan. "Take him to the Hill!" was
her listless advice.

"I've tried," said the judge, "and he
says he's not ready—not strong enough.
I told him that's what he ought to go

THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Motto for this week: There is no book by the perusal of which the mind is so much strengthened as by the perusal of the bible.—Henry Melville.

First Quarter: Lesson XI: Hebrews XI, 32—XII 2: March 12, 1916
HEROES AND MARTYRS OF FAITH

However widely dispersed the Jews always kept in touch with the temple, for them it was the very heart of their religion. Its stately and magnificent service continued to weave the spell of mystery about them and they never omitted the Temple tribute by means of which those services were maintained. The Hebrew converts to Christianity could not easily free themselves from the spoli strength as it was by the dear family relations and memories. Messianic forgiveness stood first in their creed and experience of course, but they naturally continued to depend upon the Temple service and the "intercession for all Israel" for forgiveness of their sins of ignorance and omission. Great danger lurked here. Peril was of increasing dependence upon forms that had no place in the Christian faith. This spiritual crisis in the evolution of the Jewish-Christian consciousness is superbly met by the Epistle to the Hebrews. It lays bare the essential externals of the Temple service and its spiritual inefficiency. It emphasizes the reality and supremacy of Jesus as the only and abundantly sufficient High Priest of the soul. It gently presses to a definite and final choice between the two—Moses and Christ. It solemnly warns against apostasy from Christ and vehemently exhorts to Christian perseverance.

The anonymity of the epistle is possibly an accident incident to transcription, but instead of depreciating it rather makes it more effective. One's attention is not diverted from the substance of the writer. Without the slightest preliminary intimation a glorious, transcendent truth flashes upon the reader. It is so noble that it instantly challenges attention and provokes thought. That fact is the continuity of the divine revelation: "God, who at sundry times and divers portions, piecemeal, kept speaking to the fathers in times past by the prophets. Promise in Eden, words to the Patriarchs, Moses law, Aaronic ritual, the prophetic—such were the progressive stages of revelation. Another characteristic is that it is cumulative. Jesus Christ in his person and work is consummation and conclusion of the age-long process of revelation. The progress is from evening star to moon, to stars of first magnitude and finally to sunrise in which all the monitory lights are merged. Over against Moses, the prophets and the angels under whom the Old Covenant was administered stands the Son of God as the sole Minister of the New Covenant. God spoke by prophets, now by his Son whom he hath made heir of all things. They were shadows, Jesus is substance. The kingship of Jesus is greater than that of David. The priesthood of Jesus is greater than that of Aaron. And this is so because they are universal and eternal. * * *

The writer of the Epistle is in dead earnest for practical results. He is not building up a system for the sake of a system. He is not bidding for adulation. He has an end of supreme importance in view. It is to unveil the Son of God as Savior of the world and show the three attitudes, one of which each soul of man must assume. The first is neglect. What escape is there for one who fails to pick up (literally) the transcendent treasure lying at his very feet. The second attitude is anxiety. How follows the most earnest, compact, effective warning to be found in the whole Bible. The third attitude is that of persevering faith, which in view of the cloud of witnesses lays aside every weight and keeps running the race, looking to Jesus who is both "starter" and judge. * * *

In the very midst of this epistle, aptly called the first treatise of Christian theology, rises a tall obelisk deeply incised with the names of the heroes of faith. Who shall ever measure the inspirational power of this shining poster, not in the writer's day alone, but in each successive generation. It is singularly appropriate that the faithful legend on this memorial to the faithful should be the definition of faith. No literature, creed or symbol gives such an axiomatic, comprehensive, conclusive description of the proper meaning of the sublime act of which the rational soul is capable.

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.
One of the old conquerors of Greece, who in his boyhood had visited the battlefields where Miltiades had won victories and had set up his trophies, exclaimed when he himself had achieved an historic victory and was accounting for it, "these trophies of Miltiades would never let me sleep." So the Ebenezer of Hebrews, like a granite trophy should never let the Christian soldier sleep. It should keep him alert and always at his best. * * * Hebrews has been ascribed to Clement of Rome, St. Luke, Barnabas and St. Paul. The consensus of scholarship today seems to indicate Apollonius as author, Italy outside of Rome, possibly Brundisium as the place where written. Ephesus as the place addressed and 61-62 A. D. as the date when written. * * * The reason for denying Pauline authorship is dissimilarity in mode of thought and argument. The writer does not view the Law from the ethical standpoint as St. Paul does, but from the ritualistic. Again, he quotes the Old Testament from the Septuagint version and is apparently an Hellenist, not familiar with the Hebrew text. Again, he does not so much as mention the antithesis between Jew and Gentile. * * * The epistle is addressed to persons of a class not so likely to be thrown to the beasts of the arena, as to suffer in a monetary way by boycott in business or social standing by the rebuff of those with whom they had been accustomed to associate. This indicates a class above the average of the ordinary converts and those whose discipline would enable them to understand a line of argument which would be obscure to others.

March 12, 1916. —Proverbs X 1-32
THE CAUSES OF FAILURE IN LIFE.

A nickel copy of the Book of Proverbs ought to go into the pocket of every boy and girl in Christendom. It has been called the "sanctification of common sense" and the philosophy of practical life. Dr. Guthrie says: "I have no doubt whatever that the high character which Scotsmen earned in bygone days was mainly due to their early acquaintance with the Book of Proverbs, the practical sagacity of Solomon." It is as if the whole wisdom of the book was condensed into the single passage: "My son if thine heart be wise." That is just like the whole Bible, a tender parent, solicitous to shelter his children from sin and its consequences. It is always saying in an admonitory way: "Son! 'Daughter! thine heart be wise. Not if thine head, Religion is always a thing of the heart, of the affectional nature. The very substance of it is love. 'With the heart man believeth.' As Pascal says, 'Divine things are infinitely above human things and it has pleased God that knowledge of Divine things should pass from the heart to the head. So as we must know human things in order to love them we must love Divine things in order to know them.' The whole burden of the Book of Proverbs in general and of this passage in particular is 'Goodness is Wisdom.' 'Sin is folly.' 'The words are used everywhere as synonyms. The little book is a red light swung across the track of folly. It warns of danger. Eternity alone can tell how many it has effectually cautioned.

NEW AMATEUR RULES IN BASEBALL WILL RESULT AT NATIONAL MEETING

Cincinnati, O., March 10.—A clean cut definition of precisely what constitutes amateur baseball player, and a 1915 schedule of amateur games and the two things to be accomplished at the constitutional convention meeting of the new National Baseball Federation of the United States, which began here today.

The constitutional convention proper will convene tomorrow, preceded by a public mass meeting at the council chamber in city hall. A general invitation to the amateur baseball players and fans of Cincinnati has been issued and a monster meeting is anticipated. The body will adopt uniform laws to govern the sport throughout the United States, a number of drafts have been submitted and the best suggestions will be culled from each and fashioned into a sane, workable constitution.

The convention will define the amateur and demand strict compliance with the rules laid down for him. Rules governing the semi-professional, whose activities will also be supervised by the Federation, will be adopted. This meeting will be held in the

URGENT INVESTIGATION OF PATENT MEDICINES BY FEDERAL COMMITTEE
Washington, March 10.—President Wilson was urged by a committee of the American Medical Association to recommend to congress the appointment of a commission to investigate the so-called patent medicine business, including methods of sale by advertising. Mr. Wilson promised to consider the request carefully.

CATHOLIC MISSIONS FOR MEN AND WOMEN

Chicago. Passionist Fathers to be in Charge.—Week Mission for Women, Then Week for Men.

Two missions, the first for the married and unmarried women and the second for the married and unmarried men are to be held by St. Patrick's Catholic church congregation. The first mission will open on Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock with high mass. It will continue through Saturday, March 18. Masses will be read each morning at hours which will be announced later. Evening services of Stations of the Cross, benedictions and sermons and instructions are to be held also.

The mission for the men of the congregation will be conducted along similar lines. This will commence a week from Sunday, on March 18 and continue for a week.

E. C. BAUMANN HEADS JANESVILLE MOOSE

Biggest Meeting of Year Last Evening Elects Baumann as Lodge Dictator.—Frank Mohns Secretary.

The largest attendance of the year featured last night the smoker and annual election of officers of the Janesville lodge of the Loyal Order of Moose. A keen rivalry predominated in the voting and on numerous occasions several extra ballots were necessary before the officers were elected.

Edward C. Baumann was selected as dictator. Jack Simpica was chosen as vice-dictator. Charles C. Ossman, promoter, Frank Mohns secretary, P. M. Tossier, treasurer, D. G. Griffin, inside guard, G. S. Creek, outside guard, and Floyd Adams, trustee for three years.

A smoker and social evening followed the business session. It is planned to install the new officers in their respective chairs on the occasion of the first meeting in April. This will be Thursday evening, April 7th.

STUDENTS PAY VISIT TO A RURAL SCHOOL

Training School Seniors Inspect Riverside School, Seven Miles South of Janesville, on Friday.

Thursday afternoon the members of the senior class of the county training school, accompanied by two instructors of the faculty, a party of thirty persons, visited the Riverside school, seven miles south of this city, on the Interstate line.

Miss Mamie McKewan, graduate of the training school, the visitors arrived at the school at one-thirty and remained until four-thirty, studying the building, the equipment, and the teaching methods. The name of the district, Joint No. 1, towns of Rock and La Prairie, are to be congratulated upon their fine building, fully equipped, well lighted, adequately heated and ventilated by an up-to-date system. The members of the graduating class received much benefit from the trip. During the month of April each member of the class will spend two entire days in some country school of the county, observing the first day and taking full charge of the school the second day. This plan has been carried out successfully the past five years.

LENTEN MEETINGS PROVE SUCCESSFUL

Total Attendance of 232 Reported at Fourteen Homes Thursday Evening.—Need More Meeting Places.

Fourteen meetings in as many different homes were held Thursday evening in inaugurating the union Lenten services planned by five churches of this city. The total attendance was 232. It will be necessary to secure additional meeting places before the next week gathering. In district No. 8 where meetings were held at two homes, F. S. Sheldon's and George Cary's, there was the largest attendance of any one district, the total turnout being 32. The meeting at the home of W. J. Baumann, South Jackson street, had the largest attendance of any single meeting with 27 present. The spirit and enthusiasm displayed at all the meetings was inspiring.

Edgerton News

Edgerton, March 10.—Albert E. Rice, another of the G. A. R. members, passed away and the funeral was held today from the home at 1:30. Members of the G. A. R. having the funeral in charge. Albert E. Rice was born in Ohio Nov. 11, 1842, and moved to Rock county immediately after the Civil war. He was married March 30, 1875, to Miss Lucy Gary of Dunkirk by Rev. Amos of Stoughton. Besides his wife he leaves to mourn his loss, three sisters, one at Kansas City, one at Kirksland, Ill., and one at Lowell, Mich. He served throughout the Civil war with the 15th Wisconsin. Internment took place at the Fasset cemetery and the funeral service, with T. A. Clarke conducting the funeral.

Oscar Oleson was a business caller at the Capitol City yesterday.

The many friends of Mrs. Chris Hanson will be pleased to learn that she has so far recovered from her recent sickness as to be able to return from the mercy hospital at Janesville yesterday.

Mrs. J. A. Jensen called on friends at Madison today.

DRESSMAKING CLASS GIVES BANQUET AT HIGH SCHOOL

The members of the dressmaking class at the evening school celebrated the close of the term last evening by giving an elaborate banquet at the high school. With their teachers, Miss Ida Lund and Miss M. J. Hurska, and Mrs. Bunn, as guests, covers were laid for twenty, and the tables were prettily decorated with carnations and pot-pourri which were presented to the teachers.

A Victrola added much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

The enrollment this year, though not so large as before, has been very satisfactory, and the attendance and interest has been very good considering the large amount of sickness during the winter.

FEDERATED WOMEN'S CLUBS TO MEET IN NEW YORK

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
New York, March 10.—Father Knickerbocker will tip his three-cornered hat to twenty thousand clubwomen while two millions others throughout the United States and its possessions watch from afar the opening of the biennial convention of Federated Women's clubs of the United States, in New York, May 23rd.

Escorts a city or town in the United States, Havana, Rio de Janeiro, the Philippines or Panama, but whose most prominent clubwomen will journey to Gotham for the monster feminine meetings in the mammoth Seventh Regiment armory. This convention is looked forward to as one of the biggest and most important gatherings of women ever held.

Every feminine and many a masculine problem will be considered from the moment Mrs. P. V. Pennington of Texas, President of the General Federation, hangs the block with her silver-crested ravel, until the last arduous task of the voice is stillied at the close of the sessions June 2nd.

The list of subjects will include the price of peace and petticoats; the length of love and lingerie; women's spheres and women's tears; chops and chowder, babies, ballots, civic betterment and how to avoid crow-fest, the management of husbands and other hired help; war, divorce and hats of course.

To be sure, this does not begin to approximate the length of the list, but when you pause to consider the number of things one woman can think of to talk about, then multiply that by twenty-thousand and start them all up with the avowed purpose of talking why, no wonder.

The women want President Wilson to open the convention. William Howard Taft, Miss Jane Addams, Mayor Mitchell and other notables will speak. Mrs. John Hays Hammond is chairman of the Convention's Advisory committee. Mrs. William Todd Helmut is honorary chairman of the convention. Mrs. Frances D. Everett of Chicago is chairman of the programme committee. Mrs. William Grant Brown of New York is chairman of the local biennial board.
